

Lake Prince Woods offers peace of mind.

Are you worrying about how to care for aging parents while paying for your child's college, launching a career or saving for your own retirement? Because you are both a conscientious parent and a dutiful child, you may be torn between your own needs and those of your aging parents.

Your mom or dad might be reluctant to call out for help because they don't want to burden you. If you notice your parents no longer can keep their home tidy, or the upkeep of the house is slipping, or they can't climb stairs to the laundry room any more, it may be time to assist them in assessing their situation.

"When my wife and I decided to move into a continuing care retirement community just before Christmas, we told each of our children that our decision represented the most significant gift we had ever given them. We did not want to burden our children with caring for us, while raising their own families and working in their productive careers. We are in a safe, comfortable home now surrounded by friends. We have given peace of mind to ourselves and our children.
